School is living history

119-year old classroom building is open to visitors

The 119-year-old Little Red Schoolhouse that sits on the University campus across from the Education Building serves as a living history of what school used to be like for students over a century ago.

The BG News

The bell on top of the schoolhouse clangs, signaling to the children that it is time for class. Boys and girls of various ages hurry toward the front of the little schoolhouse. Girls enter through the left door -- boys through the right.

This was the scene on a typical morning 100 years ago at the District No. 6 School near Norwalk, Ohio. Today, the schoolhouse has a different name and location.

Known as the Little Red Schoolhouse, the 119-year-old structure now stands on the University campus across from the Education Building. Marilyn Braatz, coordinator of tours for the Little Red Schoolhouse, said the schoolhouse is actually just one of over 2,000 pieces in the David G. Elsass Educational Memorabilia Collection.

"It is intended as a museum, but it is really a living history museum," Braatz said.

David Elsass, for whom the collection is named, serves as director of the Educational Memorabilia Center. The search for a schoolhouse was first suggested by former University President William Jerome, according to Elsass. President Jerome thought a schoolhouse would be the perfect place to hold the University's educational antique collection.

Bringing the schoolhouse to the University was not an easy task. There were problems both with financing the project and with moving the schoolhouse to the University.

"Through a private fundraising drive, over $14,000 was available," Braatz said. This amount was about $50,000 short of the estimated cost of the project.

Luckily, help came from an unexpected source, she said.

"Arthur Wilkowski [Representative from Toledo] heard that the schoolhouse project needed more funding," Braatz said. "He introduced a bill in the Ohio General Assembly that would give the University a $50,000 appropriation from the proceeds of the first Ohio State Lottery."

After some debate, the bill passed. With the necessary funding no longer a problem, moving the schoolhouse was the final task.

"The schoolhouse was dismantled brick-by-brick on weekends and brought to the University by Daniel Heisler and his three sons," Elsass said.

While dismantling the building, Heisler noticed that the bell was missing from the top of the school. The Linder family, who offered the schoolhouse to the University, did not know what happened to the bell.

"We found another old bell that fit, so we used the re-

Memorial scheduled for retired professor

by Katie Simmons
The BG News

A retired University professor of sociology died last month and will be remembered by family, friends and the University community at a memorial service Tuesday.

Ronald Serge Denisoff retired from the University in 1990 after 20 years of service as a teacher and researcher.

"He was very good for this University," said Joseph Perry, a professor of sociology. "He was devoted to the study of contemporary popular culture music and brought so much respect to himself and this school."

Denisoff died at the age of 55 at St. Luke's Hospital in Maumee. He is survived by wife, Ursula; two daughters, Alegra and Rachel Denisoff; and two sons, Gabriel and Arden Baty.

The memorial service will take place in Prout Chapel at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 13. A reception will follow the service in the sociology department's atrium in Williams Hall.

Professor To Be Remembered

- ✓ Ronald Denisoff, a retired professor of sociology, died last month at the age of 55 at St. Luke's Hospital.
- ✓ A memorial service for Denisoff will take place Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Prout Chapel.
- ✓ He taught at the University from 1970-1990 during which time he also wrote many articles.

Denisoff received his bachelor's and master's degrees from San Francisco State College and his doctorate from Simon Fraser University.

In addition to teaching, Denisoff became the founder and editor of the magazine Popular Music and Society and also had works published in Rolling Stone and The Journal of American Folklore.

Chief reports dumpsters put on tracks

Placing large objects on railroad can cause dangerous situations

by Ginger Phillips
The BG News

People looking to have fun often play foolish pranks. But they should know putting large objects on the railroad tracks is not as much fun as they think.

Last week, two reports were made of garbage dumpsters being placed on the railroad tracks.

City Police Chief Galen Ash said he suspects the dumpsters were placed on the tracks by young people, probably drunk, playing a prank.

Ash said this type of prank could "end up being very deadly."

"It probably won't derail a train, but things like that do happen," he said.

The first report was made Sept. 2 by a woman who was awakened at night by sounds outside. The woman saw two men push a dumpster onto the railroad tracks on East Merry Street. Two officers were able to push the dumpster off the tracks while a train was approaching.

The second incident took place Sept. 7, when police were told of another dumpster, again on the railroad tracks by East Merry Street. The contents of the dumpster had been dumped onto the tracks.

Ash said although this hasn't been a big problem over the years, it has caused some worry.

Couches and cars as well as dumpsters have been put on the tracks, but fortunately, a concerned person has always made a report before any damage could be done, he said.

Ash said putting a large object on the railroad tracks may seem funny to some, but it may have very serious consequences.

"You can go to prison very easily," he said. "If we catch somebody, we'll prosecute them to the maximum penalty."

Bob Libkind, a spokesman for Conrail Railroad, said Conrail works closely with police departments along the tracks to apprehend the culprits.

"We will prosecute and we will not treat it lightly," Libkind said. "People who do this sort of thing are putting themselves and others in danger. It is not just a prank. It is potentially life-threatening."

Libkind said this type of prank may backfire on those who do it and stand back to watch what happens.

"It can just as easily come back and boomerang on them," he said. "It can take a lid off a dumpster and decapitate someone who did it."

Flying still safe despite fatalities

It was a clear Thursday night when Pittsburgh International Airport got a call from USAir flight 427 coming from Chicago's O'Hare Airport requesting landing clearance.

What followed wasn't quite clear as events developed so fast and later witnesses were not able to agree on the exact sequence. But what they could be sure about is the Boeing 737-300 burst into a ball of flames so great that what was left could not be recognized as once being an airplane.

Whether or not the plane exploded in the air or on impact is of no immediate consequence to the families of the victims who died or the many individuals who were left to clean up the carnage.

What is left is the impact of the loss of loved ones and the reality of their future without them.

Beaver County Coroner Wayne Tatalovich said the task of gathering and identifying the bodies was continuing, but some bodies may never be identified.

A friend of a member of the fire department in nearby South Heights explained how hard it was for the people involved in the cleanup. "He had to take one guy out of a tree in pieces, and that was bad enough, but when he came across the lifeless body of a baby, he came home for a while to rest."

The News sends out its deepest condolences to the families who suffered a loss in the crash. USAir should also be commended for its handling of the situation and their offer to counsel the families of the victims.

But while this crash is a tragedy, it should not deter people from flying. In proportion to miles flown, airline fatalities have been dropping for decades. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, 31 fatalities were suffered by passengers aboard major U.S. carriers during 1992. That works out to 0.0006 deaths per million aircraft miles flown.

The numbers were even smaller last year.

If we are to use and depend upon the technology of flight, we must also be aware of its dangers. While slight, the chance of disaster is always imminent.

The crash at Pittsburgh is a lesson to us all -- technology can fail. But we must not abandon it for this reason alone. We must hope the airlines will learn from this tragedy and prevent it from ever happening again.

New solution will solve problem

It's roughly 1:30 p.m. and your mouth is a little parched. You decide to get something to quench those dry taste buds of yours, and you head into the Student Union to get something to drink. You're in the mood for a Snapple, the official beverage of the Excellence In Broadcasting network (they broadcast Rush Limbaugh), and today you feel like having a Pink Lemonade Snapple. You take it to the counter to purchase the drink and the person behind the register says, "$1.59 please." Your immediate reaction is most likely "What a ripoff!"

That is a common experience for most students that attend the University. There are two other options other than paying $1.59 for a Snapple. The first option is to go off-campus and pay the right price -- $.80. The second option is to just drink water.

However, there is a solution to campus ripoffs, and the answer is capitalism. That's right. We need to apply free market forces and competition on this campus. A much needed solution to the socialism we have now.

It was mentioned in the beginning of this semester in this space that capitalism limits creativity. Nothing could be further from the truth. No one can give one example of a socialist society that is thriving today. In fact, Cuba is a socialist state and hundreds of Cubans are leaving the country.

Capitalism forces people to be creative by offering a better product or service than the next person they are competing with in the same business.

Lower prices can be provided to the students on this campus by opening the doors to outside competition.

A short ride up to our main rival, The University of Toledo, provided many examples of ways to provide lower prices on products and services.

The University of Toledo has four fast food services in their Student Union. They include Subway, Taco Bell, Baskin Robbins and Wendy's. All four of these restaurants provide the junk food college students like to eat at a price we can afford. Sure, we have all the fast food restaurants right on Wooster street, but they also have fast food joints around their campus.

At UT, you can even buy a Snapple for $.80, or a Coke for $.50. Here you have to pay an extra $.15 to have a Coke and a smile.

This University takes more from our wallets in other ways too. The library charges $.30 per day for every day that a book is late. The UT library only charges $.10 per day.

And, of course, there is the continual problem of parking. The University gets us with those little orange envelopes we find stuck between the front window and windshield wipers of our cars. I saw one student driving his car out of the parking lot and had at least a half a dozen tickets on his car. These little orange envelopes and registration dues support the entire Parking and Traffic Department. From July 1993 to June 1994, Parking and Traffic collected $483,131.45 from parking fines alone. They also collected $495,110.31 in parking fees, giving them a combined total of $978,241.76. That is nearly a million dollars.

Of course Stacie Schroeder over at the P & T Department was kind enough to inform me that they operate under an auxiliary budget. That is, they have to generate all their own income to pay for utilities, maintenance of parking lots, shuttle buses, pickup trucks and the people that stuff those little orange envelopes.

Stacie Schroeder also reworded that famous quote saying, "We don't have a parking problem." It must be something that just the student population imagines.

I have a solution to all the price gouging and parking problems. Let Meijer build their new store right here on this campus. We'll just destroy the Student Union and put it right there. That ugly building is hardly a Student Union anyway.

An added benefit in this solution is that the ocean of asphalt they will bring in to complete a project such as I have proposed can provide plenty of parking. Heck, maybe they can build a two or three level parking garage while they're at it.

The new Meijer can provide all the amenities college students have become accustomed to like a coffee shop and study lounge.

On top of that they will plant 187 trees, and that should make any environmentalist happy. The proposed site then can be preserved for future farming.

Of course, my study isn't that broad and doesn't include a big random sample of universities from around this country. One thing is quite apparent, things can be changed to benefit the students of this campus. And nothing would be better than capitalism to drive the outrageous cost of food and other services down to a more reasonable level. So, let's break the chains of socialism and have free market forces operating on this campus.

Speak up -- it's your education

A person, a hungry person, decides to go out to eat. Upon entering the restaurant of his choice and taking his seat, the waiter brings out a meal before the hungry person even looks at a menu, let alone orders anything. But not only that, the waiter also brings out the outrageously expensive check for this meal that the hungry person did not want in the first place. But instead of protesting this whole ordeal, the customer eats what is placed before him, pays the check and walks out the restaurant's door. This story may sound ridiculous to you but before you cast judgment, I've got news for you. The hungry person that I am referring to is you! That's right. The restaurant is your college. The waiter is naturally a teacher of yours. And the meal you just ate is whatever your teacher taught today. I think you can see that the price is your tuition, books, etc.

Now, I don't know about you, but who in the world would walk into a restaurant, eat without ordering, pay whatever they charge and enjoy it! So why do we do this when it comes to our education, something far more important than a mere meal?

It's time students realize a few basic rights, that through time and the existing education system, have been ignored. And the specific right I am talking about here is taking back your education. If you don't like what the syllabus includes or doesn't contain, say something!

Have you heard the theory that, on average, every class you sit through bored, daydreaming, writing love letters or whatnot, actually costs you $27.50? Did you know that? Puts a little different perspective on things, doesn't it? It doesn't matter whether you like the class or not. You still are paying for it. So the next time you sit through a class that you have deemed boring, please remember that you are paying for this "waste of time."

Here is what I have done (that's right, I'm not just wasting paper here, I do practice what I preach). After class, approach your teacher and politely explain that you do not agree the current class subject material is the most important stuff that needs to be discussed.

I advise talking one-on-one rather than making a scene in class because that would trap your teacher into a corner, making them out to be the "bad guys." Trapped animals are not rational.

Maybe some of you feel more strongly, believing that the class is going nowhere fast and serious revisions are needed today. So speak up!

But realize this. These teachers are just older versions of us. People, too, that are probably just as bored as we students are. Possibly, they were given a list of subject matter (a meal) and told to teach (eat) this. So be easy with them -- easy but firm. You get more with honey than you do with vinegar.

Now is the right time for a change. I want my money's worth! Because I am not only this University's employer but also its customer. And that means I have the right in deciding, to a certain degree, what I want to be taught. We as students do have the right to work with our teachers and decide what is worthy to be taught. I am sure we can remember a teacher that taught stuff that was so outdated, worthless and down right nauseating.

I've got a class now that should be renamed "Useless Information Taught by Monotone Teaching Voice 101." It takes all the strength I can muster to stay awake. But never fear, I all ready had a talk with my teacher and things are going to change now!

So, there you have it. My point has been made. Take back your education. Stop allowing people to spoon feed you and take charge of your life in every way, from your education to your relationships to the weather! Speak up! Carpe Diem! And above all, whether you are in a concrete-walled classroom or out in life's classroom, take advantage of all there is to offer. You may never get the same chance again!

ACROSS THE NATION

Actress Jessica Tandy dies

NEW YORK -- Jessica Tandy, who won an Academy Award at age 80 for her portrayal of a spirited Southern matriarch in "Driving Miss Daisy," died Sunday at her Connecticut home after a four-year battle with ovarian cancer. She was 85.

Her husband, actor Hume Cronyn, was by her side when she died about 6 a.m., Leslee Dart, the couple's press agent, said in announcing the death.

Tandy's acting career spanned more than 60 years, mostly on stage in New York and London. She was Broadway's original Blanche DuBois in the memorable 1947 production of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire" that co-starred Marlon Brando as Stanley Kowalski.

Some of her best-known stage appearances were with Cronyn, her second husband. Together they starred on Broadway in such plays as "The Fourposter," "The Physicists," "A Delicate Balance," "Noel Coward in Two Keys," "The Gin Game," "Foxfire" and "The Petition."

The actress won three Tony awards, Broadway's highest honor -- first for "Streetcar" in 1948, then "The Gin Game" in 1978 and "Foxfire" in 1983.

But it was as Daisy Werthan, the independent, crotchety widow who forms a deep friendship with her black chauffeur, that Tandy scored her biggest popular success. "Driving Miss Daisy," adapted from Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, was a box-office and artistic hit, grossing more than $100 million and winning a best-picture Oscar in 1990 as well as the top acting award for Tandy.

"I'm not a big movie name, and I knew they needed someone who was bankable," Tandy said at the time. "Certainly, in films, I've played small supporting roles for the most part. What has been happening to the film is remarkable, but there is something about the story that has allowed the play to run for years."

Besides "Driving Miss Daisy," Tandy's movies included "The Seventh Cross" (1944), "Forever Amber" (1947), Walt Disney's "Light in the Forest" (1958), Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds" (1963), "Butley" (1974) with Alan Bates, "The World According to Garp" (1982) with Robin Williams, "The Bostonians" (1984), "Cocoon" (1985), "Fried Green Tomatoes" (1991) and "Used People" (1992).

Tandy also played many classical roles on stage, primarily in London and in such regional theaters as the Guthrie in Minneapolis, the Stratford (Connecticut) American Shakespeare Festival, the Shaw Festival at Niagara on the Lake and the Stratford Festival in Ontario, Canada.

Born in London on June 7, 1909, Tandy was the daughter of a rope manufacturer who died of cancer when his daughter was 12.

Tandy trained at the Ben Greet Academy of Acting in London and made her professional debut in 1927 at a small theater in Soho. In 1932, she married actor Jack Hawkins. They had one child, Susan. The marriage ended in divorce.

In 1940, Tandy and her daughter emigrated to the United States. She landed minor parts in several Broadway plays. While in New York, she met Cronyn through another actor.

Judge gets role in movie

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio -- This time, the judge really is the juror.

Wyandot County Common Pleas Judge John Hunter plays juror No. 7 in "The Shawshank Redemption," an upcoming release starring Timothy Robbins and Morgan Freeman.

About 1,100 Ohio residents were extras in the movie, filmed last summer at various north-central Ohio locations, including Wyandot County court and the defunct Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield.

The story, based on a novella by Stephen King, centers on the friendship that develops between two convicts in the 1940s, '50s and '60s. Robbins and Freeman portray the inmates.

The movie will premiere Tuesday at Mansfield's Renaissance Theater. It is expected to open at theaters in October.

Hunter, who has no lines in the movie, is the juror who sits in the last chair on the right in the second row of the jury box. He said the experience was tedious, but fun.

The jurors ate fried chicken while they deliberated in one scene. They had to shoot that scene two or three times.

"The mashed potatoes got a little crusty. And I'm not a big chicken lover either, so I faked it," Hunter said.

Carolyn Law, 34, who lives in Delaware and has been Wyandot County's court reporter for seven years, plays the same role in the movie. She recorded the actors' lines as they spoke, as if it were a real trial.

"It was just like doing my everyday job," she said. "They said, 'Pretend.' But I can't pretend so I typed the script as it was read."

She kept the notes for her scrapbook.

Rabid bat found in school

TROY, Ohio -- A school principal confiscated a live, rabid bat from a fifth-grade boy after the creature earlier bit the boy's younger sister, a school district spokesman said.

The bat did not come into contact with any other students at Kyle Elementary School, spokesman John Miller said. The girl, a second-grader, was taken to Children's Medical Center Friday to begin the series of three rabies shots.

The boy carried the bat to school in a box to show his science teacher, Miller said. Principal Jill Wilson confiscated the bat before classes started upon learning that it had bitten the girl's hand.

Wilson called the children's mother and instructed her not to bring the girl to school until a doctor had treated her, Miller said. The principal then sent the animal to the Miami County General Health District, where it was killed and tested positive for rabies.

The rabies virus is spread through an infected animal's saliva, the county Health Department said.

Akron gets zip against Falcons

BG destroys winless team, 45-0

by Mike Kazimore
The BG News

In the first half of Saturday's game against Akron, the only thing that could stop the Bowling Green offensive attack was the clock.

The Falcons scored touchdowns on their first four possessions before the halftime gun put an end to their fifth drive. When the smoke cleared, the Falcons found themselves with a 28-0 lead entering the locker room.

Blackney

For the game, BG scored on seven of its 10 possessions. Two drives were ended by the clock while the Zips defense only managed to register one stop of BG's offense.

The Falcons have now outscored the Zips 118-10 in last three meetings.

"One of the best performances that we had a year ago, where we put it together both offensively and defensively, was against Akron," head coach Gary Blackney said. "I told the team that we needed a similar performance."

"We needed it not only to beat Akron, but to stay in contention in the Mid-American Conference."

The Falcons set the tone of the game on their opening possession. Starting on its own 20, BG used a pin-point short passing attack and a hard-nosed running game to methodically march down the field.

Tailback Michael Parker capped off the 16-play, 80-yard drive when he found the end zone on a 1-yard plunge. Quarterback Ryan Henry completed all five of his passes on the drive for 34 yards.

Defensively, the Zips didn't get much better after that first drive, although Henry did misfire on a pass attempt to Ronnie Redd in the second quarter. For the game, Henry set a school record by completing 94 percent (13-14) of his pass attempts.

"I just tried to take what they were giving me and not try to force any passes," Henry said. "I think that I improved a lot from last week and played a much smarter game."

"If we can play the way we want to play and the way we're coached to play like we did tonight [Saturday], a lot of good things are going to continue to happen for us."

While Henry was busy picking the Zips secondary apart, the BG running backs were bruising their way to a big game.

The Falcons ground attack ran over and around the Zips for 274 yards. Keylan Cates was the featured back, racking up 91 yards on just 13 carries.

"I can't remember a time where our running backs were more punishing and more physical than they were against Akron," Blackney said. "But a lot of the credit has to go to the offensive line, because if they weren't holding their blocks, then the backs wouldn't have the chance to do what they did."

Henry capped off each of BG's next three possessions with touchdown passes. Two of the strikes went to tight end Ryan McElroy while Rameir Martin hauled in the third.

The pass to Martin was Henry's most impressive throw of the day. On third and 4 from the Zips 19-yard line, Henry dropped back in the pocket. Feeling pressure, he stepped up, pump-faked once, ran toward the line of scrimmage and spotted Martin in the left-hand corner of the end zone.

"I saw Ryan scrambling a little and just tried to run with him and get open," Martin said. "That's really a patented thing for Ryan to run toward the line and draw the defense in before throwing it. I saw the ball coming and I was just hoping that Ryan hadn't stepped over the line."

Unfortunately for the Zips, the Falcons were just as overpowering on the defensive side of the ball. Akron only managed 153 yards on and were forced to punt seven times.

"Defensively we were able to put a lot of pressure on them," outside linebacker Willie Gibson said. "Our whole defense really played well and I think that took a lot of pressure off of the offense."

The Falcons added three more scores after the intermission, including two touchdowns and a career-best 47-yard field goal by Brian Leaver.

"Our players played hard and we executed tonight," head coach Gary Blackney said.

Blackney pleased with Falcons' depth

by Marty Fuller
The BG News

During Bowling Green's 45-0 trouncing of the Akron Zips, the Falcons were able to scroll through their depth chart and see what kind of talent they had on the bench. Head coach Gary Blackney got some of his second- and third-stringers into the slaughter and was pleased with their returns.

"Although we didn't match up well with North Carolina last week, the depth factor is starting to become apparent," Blackney said.

One of the most obvious moves Blackney made was pulling starting quarterback Ryan Henry to give second-string signal-caller Derek Kidwell some playing time. The switch took place with 3:08 left in the third quarter with BG leading the Zips 31-0.

The 6-3, 215-pound sophomore had only thrown passes in two previous collegiate games. In last year's contest against Akron, Kidwell went 2-of-3 for 27 yards, including a 15-yard scoring strike to Rameir Martin. The other game he played in was against Kent, where his only attempt was a completion good for 8 yards.

His early success continued as he went 3-for-4 and tallied up 39 yards against Akron. More importantly, Kidwell led the Falcons on their final two touchdown drives.

"I think he came in and moved the offense really well," Henry said of Kidwell. "It's a big plus when Derek can come in and keep everything flowing, and I think that says a lot about him and the overall depth of the team."

Another key element in BG's depth was the use of the Falcon running backs. After an unexceptionable performance against the Wolfpack, five BG backs forced the Zips to respect them.

The quintet trampled Akron's front line for 262 yards on 54 carries -- an average of 4.8 yards an attempt. Backup tailback Keylan Cates was the high man with 91 yards on 13 carries, including touchdowns runs of 17 and 9 yards.

"I think he [Kidwell] came in and moved the offense really well. It's a big plus when Derek can come in and keep everything flowing."

Ryan Henry
BG quarterback

"[Cates] hadn't played football for two years, and he was kind of feeling his way around. He got his rhythm going and got his game in sync," Blackney said.

Some new names also appeared on the defensive side of the ball. Freshman linebacker Todd Bush contributed four assisted tackles and so did backup nose guard Dave Bruhowzki. Freshman Brian Manns, Vince Palko's backup at inside linebacker, had two solo tackles and five assisted tackles.

"The depth that we have has been developing over a period of four years," Blackney said. "I think it's a great thing for our assistant coaches to go out and be able to attract quality athletes."

third goal of the half at 27:05. Midfielder Steve Klein and forward Jamie Morgan assisted on Kindl's second goal in as many games.

The Falcons have now scored 12 goals in their first four games.

"In the week preceding the Akron tournament, Coach [Palmisano] really concentrated on the attack," Concannon said.

Concannon said movement is the key to the Falcon attack.

"What we want to do is to move as a unit on the field," he said.

"We don't like to get spread out because there's more room for error. We've had tremendous success just keeping with that."

BG's backers were kept busy by USI's penchant for the long ball.

"Southern Indiana made it difficult because everything they got, they launched," Palmisano said. "They kept on throwing the ball into the defensive third of the field."

Agassi captures title with style

by Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Andre Agassi, navigating the most perilous path to the U.S. Open championship in history, battered Michael Stich from the start Sunday and slammed him with a shot at his wrist at the end of a thoroughly ruthless performance.

Agassi never lost his serve in his 6-1, 7-6 (7-5), 7-5 victory, putting on such a commanding show that he beat the former Wimbledon champion in every phase of the game.

"I'm still in a state of shock," Agassi said after receiving the $550,000 winner's check and the silver trophy. Girlfriend Brooke Shields stood by, snapping photos of the moment.

"It's quite amazing what I pulled off," Agassi said. "I can't believe it. It's been an incredible two weeks for me."

No unseeded player had ever run a gauntlet of five seeded players as Agassi did. None even beat more than three. To win this title, Agassi had to beat, in order, No. 12 Wayne Ferreira, No. 6 Michael Chang, No. 13 Thomas Muster, No. 9 Todd Martin and No. 4 Stich.

The only other champion to beat five seeds was Vic Seixas in 1954, when 20 players were seeded.

"QUOTABLE" Falcon Football 1994

McElroy on career-best five receptions:

"I really benefit from the fact that teams have to make changes to try and stop Rameir and Ronnie. The defense is usually concentrating on them so much that it makes getting open a lot easier for me."

Cal Bowers on the performance of the offensive line:

"When we keep our offensive unit on the field and score all those points then it really makes all the hard work we go through each week in practice pay off."

Bowers on blocking for five different backs:

"Running backs have a good feel for what the offensive line is going to do - how they're going to block. We don't really block differently for any of the runners. If anything I each one of them adjusts to the line."

Phil Dunn on the Zips inability to stop BG:

"There's really not much to say. They just ran the ball down our throats. We have no excuses."

Ryan Henry on playing close to home:

"Playing here at the Rubber Bowl and winning like we did really means a lot to me. Not that I have any bad feelings about Akron, but it was just nice to get a win so close to home. I know that a lot of the guys from around the area were excited to get to play in front of friends and family."

Akron QB Matt Kaulig on the Zips performance:

"We have the tools to be a good offensive football team. We just need to get a couple more plays to go our way to get our confidence level up there. Once we feel more confident and get a little more comfortable with what we're trying to do we'll be okay."

Gerry Faust on the Zips:

"We need to evaluate some of the things that we're trying to do both offensively and defensively, because we're obviously not doing them very well right now. I think that we're just going to have to get back on the practice field and put in a lot of hard work."

Rameir Martin on BG's intensity:

"After last week we really had a lot of frustration that we wanted to vent. It didn't really matter who we were going to play but we were going to take our frustrations out on them - and it just happened to be Akron."

THE EDGE

Bowling Green 45, Akron 0

Quarterback:

Matt Kaulig was pressured into a dismal 9-22 performance in which he threw for less than 100 yards. The Falcons used more quarterbacks than they threw incomplete passes. Ryan Henry and Derek Kidwell combined for a near perfect night as they completed 16-18 passes. Although he didn't attempt a pass even Mark Dunaway saw action for BG.

Running Backs:

The Zips option game, fizzled as they were only able to net 66 yards on 31 carries. BG used a five running back attack to ramble for over 250 yards. Keylan Cates was the featured back as he racked up 91 yards on just 13 carries.

Wide Receivers and Tight Ends:

Stanford hauled in 3 passes for 57 yards, but the rest of Akron's receiving corps only contributed 50 yards to the Zips deflated air attack. Ronnie Redd extended his consecutive games with a catch streak to 36 and Rameir Martin hauled in a 19-yard scoring strike. But, Henry's main target was tight end Ryan McElroy who grabbed five passes, including two that went for touchdowns.

Offensive Line:

The BG big men gave Henry and Kidwell all the time they needed in the pocket. The offensive line didn't allow a sack and play after play it provided BG running backs with numerous holes to run through. Akron's line was overpowered all night long, allowing Kaulig to be pressured on nearly every pass attempt.

Defensive Line:

BG's defensive linemen got to know Kaulig personally as they were in his face all night long. The Falcons line destroyed the Zips rhythm and held them to just 2.8 yards per rushing attempt. The Zips defensive front four were consistently blown off the line and could do little to disrupt BG's offensive attack. Even on the few occasions that Henry was pressured he was able to step up and complete the pass.

Linebackers:

Akron's linebacking crew gave a solid effort led by Phil Dunn. Dunn tackled everything in sight as he recorded 20 stops on the night. However, most of the tackles that the Zips linebackers made happened after BG had already gained four or five yards on the play. Once again, Vince Palko led all BG defenders with 10 stops. Fellow linebackers Chache Leal and Willie Gibson also contributed as they combined to record three sacks.

Defensive Backs:

Akron's defensive backs were dismantled by the accurate throws of Henry and Kidwell. The soft secondary could only stop two of 18 Falcon pass attempts while also giving up three scoring strikes. On the rare occasions that Kaulig had time to look downfield he rarely was able to spot an open receiver because of the Falcons tight coverage. Steve Rodriguez came up with his second interception in as many games, while Tony Everhart also got an int.

Special Teams:

For the second straight game place kicker Brian Leaver nailed a career-best field goal -- this time he struck from 47 yards out. Although the Falcons punt return unit did commit BG's first turnover of the year when Steve Ayers muffed a punt the mistake didn't cost them. Ronnie Redd collected 32 yards on two punt returns -- including a nifty 25-yard scamper through the middle of the field. Although the Zips punt unit performed admirably the edge still goes to Bowling Green.

Coaching:

While Blackney was supported by a superior cast of players he came up with the perfect game plan that neutralized Akron's offensive attack and exploited the Zips defense. Gerry Faust is still left searching for the offense that best suits his club's talent.
